USES AND DISCLOSURES OF HEALTH INFORMATION

We may use and disclose your health information for treatment (such as to provide, coordinate, or manage your care), to obtain payment for treatment (such as sending billing information to a health insurance plan), and for administrative purposes (such as assessing the care and outcomes in your case and others like it).

We may use or disclose health information about you for several other reasons. Subject to certain requirements, we may disclose health information about you without your authorization to avert a serious threat to your health or safety or the health or safety of another person, reporting and investigating abuse and neglect, and reporting health statistics; for health oversight activities such as government benefit program audits and investigations. We may provide information when required by law, such as for judicial and administrative proceedings or in response to an order of a court, administrative tribunal, or authorized governmental subpoena or other investigative demand.

In limited situations we may give out information about you to your family members, friends, and others who are involved in your care.

We may also contact you about appointment reminders, treatment alternatives, and to ask your opinion of your satisfaction with our services, or to tell you about health-related benefits or services that may be of interest to you.

In any other situation, we will ask for your written authorization before using or disclosing any identifiable health information about you. If you choose to sign an authorization to disclose information, you can later revoke that authorization to stop any further uses and disclosures.

In most cases, you have the right to look at or get a copy of health information about you that we use to make decisions about you. You also have the right to receive a list of instances where we have disclosed health information about you for reasons other than treatment, payment, or related administrative purposes. If you believe that information in your record is incorrect or if important information is missing, you have the right to request that we correct the existing information or add the missing information.

You have the right to request that your health information be communicated to you in a confidential manner such as sending mail to an address other than your home. If this notice was sent to you electronically, you may obtain a paper copy of the notice.

You may request in writing that we not use or disclose your information for treatment, payment, or administrative purposes or to persons involved in your care except when specifically authorized by you, when required by law, or in emergency circumstances.
